Finding our bargain offerings so often in the papers may lead you to ask: "Are these bona fide bargains or advertising adjectives?" They are genuine bargains, and the reason's simple.

In a city of this size there are always people or companies that are forced to sell-leaving town, settling an estate, or a thousand and one other things. For the ready money they will take less than a fair price—we are just up-to-date enough to get hold of these snaps and tell you about them. Set the argument?
